

Nemko Europe Certification mark

What is required in Europe?

It is common knowledge that CE marking is what is required to sell your products in Europe. But the CE marking is getting more complex by the year with the introduction of new mandatory directives and with strengthened requirements in the directives.

For your typical electrical and electronic product up to five CE marking directive may be required.

The manufacturers challenge

Getting the overview of the requirements for your products is a costly and time-consuming task.

Keeping updated with new directives and standards may be even more time-consuming. Time you rather want to spend working on sales of your products.

Even after you have built the technical file required there are still work to be done updating this and keeping it available for more than ten years in the future. For every product.

What can Nemko offer?

Nemko can offer a custom made service tailored to your needs. For a new product we can do everything from guiding on applicable directives and standards, perform testing or review documentation and help building the required technical file. Further we can grant the Nemko Europe certificate and provide you a prefilled Declaration of Conformity – for you to sign! Furthermore we will store on-line your technical file and even inform you when there are new standards or directives relevant for your product in particular. You will also get the right to use the Nemko N mark on your product and in marketing.

Your benefits

In short you should be able to spend your valuable time on developing and selling your products. Through the Nemko Europe service our goal is to enable you to do this.
