

NEMKO EUROPE

Providing lasting CE compliance for your electrical and electronic products

For a manufacturer or OEM producer of electrical and electronic products, CE marking is mandatory in order to access the European market.

However, a growing number of Directives has made compliance an increasingly complex matter:

A survey in 2012 shows that 82 % of the products which were not certified by a third party testing and certification body failed to comply with CE marking standards and regulations*.

Nemko Europe certification service:
Compliance without complexity.

*IFIA Consumer Product Safety in Europe 2013 survey.

Nemko Europe Certification Service

A complete compliance solution:

Do you manufacture under your own brand?

Even if your products are excellent, without proper documentation and certification they may never reach the 500 million people in the European market. Your responsibilities extend beyond that of making a product that complies with a growing number of requirements. You need the proper documentation to prove it, and you need to stay updated with current legislations at all time.

- You must identify the proper Directives and standards
- You must produce and store the Technical Construction File (TCF) for 10 years
- The EU Declaration of Conformity (DoC) must be produced and signed
- You must stay updated on future changes to all relevant directives and standards
- You must ensure conformity in serial production

With the new Nemko Europe service you can leave these demanding duties to us. The only thing you have to do is sign the DoC. Everything else – including information on future updates of directives and standards relevant to your product– is a part of our service.

Nemko is focused, efficient and responsive

The standards and regulations affecting your products are changing at ever faster rates. At the same time, staying ahead of the global competition requires continuously shorter time-to-market. Delays in obtaining access around the world could be costly in terms of lost sales.

Are you a manufacturer under someone else's brand (OEM)?

Your responsibilities for CE compliance will depend on your contract with the client. However, as a manufacturer you will in practice be responsible for producing all technical documentation as specified in the directives, and usually you have to provide your client with this information.

As a manufacturer you may not want to distribute detailed technical documentation. In this case, the new Nemko Europe service is very useful to you, even if you are not responsible for CE marking of the end product: When we take care of the certification, all technical documentation stays with us – and only us. You can use our certificate as technical file to show that a third party has verified the file and found it compliant, instead of transferring sensitive documentation.

That's why you need a responsive and fast-moving certification partner like Nemko. We are a focused and specialised organisation of 500 highly skilled people with local and global expertise.

Our company is built on a culture that embraces the will to go the extra mile for our customers. That's why leading global players as well as smaller organisations describe us as one of the best in our class. Nemko has well defined procedures and work methods in order to make a complex task such as market access simple for you. We are fast and efficient, and we support your efforts to stay ahead of the competition.

For further details, visit us at nemko.com
You can also email us at europa@nemko.com